

Fayette County Law Library features work of lifelong crafter

Mark Hofmann
DAILY COURIER

Sunday, December 13, 2009

Ever since she was a young girl, Tammy Boyle, now the Fayette County Human Resources Assistant, was interested in sewing.

When Boyle turned 16, she received a sewing machine and started making crafts. She hasn't stopped.

"It really started taking off," said Boyle, who worked at a fabric store in the early 1990s.

Along with basic craft work, Boyle also makes seasonal items for holidays like Thanksgiving and Halloween and also patriotic crafts.

"Basically, it's always seasonal," Boyle said.

On display at the Fayette County Law Library at the Fayette County Courthouse for the month of December are Boyle's crafts for the Christmas season.

"Christmas is the most popular," said Boyle, who had placed a quarter of all the different Christmas crafts she has created and continues to make.

Of the Christmas items on display, popular items include gingerbread men and "Melt-away Max," a snowman that appears to be melting on whatever surface it rests.

Christmas crafts on display at the Fayette County Courthouse Law Library are for sale.

To inquire about purchasing those or any other craft items, contact Tammy Boyle at 724-437-3685.

Tammy Boyle, Fayette County Human Resources Assistant and crafter, completes organizing her work that is on display in the Law Library of the Fayette County Courthouse. Of the Christmas crafts on display, popular items include gingerbread men and "Melt-away Max," a snowman that appears to be melting on whatever surface it rests.

Evan Sanders/Daily Courier